

TELL 'EM TO SEE ME, SAYS TOWNS

Every Time I Sit Down to a Juicy Steak Now I Give Thanks to Tanlac, He Declares.

"Every time I sit down to a juicy steak now I give thanks to Tanlac for taking me off that milk and mush diet I had to live on for a year," said Joseph R. Towns, the well-known and popular proprietor of the Sanitary Meat Market, of Marshall, Mich.

"I had stomach trouble of the worst sort and was going down hill so fast I thought I would have to give up my business. I was so nervous and worried I dreaded to see night come, as it meant little for me and then in the morning I was so fagged out I dreaded to go to my market."

"The money I spent for Tanlac was the best investment I ever made. I never dreamed a medicine could do the work it did for me. Three bottles was all I needed to make me as sound as a dollar. I never felt better or more like working in my life than I do right now. I eat anything I want, my stomach is in good shape and I am brimful of energy. I sleep all night without turning over and get up in the morning as happy as a boy."

"Not only has Tanlac made me feel fit and fine, but I have also gained twenty-five pounds in weight. If anybody wants to know more about what I think of Tanlac let them come to me and I will be glad to tell them. It certainly hasn't an equal."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Advertisement.

Inquisitive Lillian.

Lillian, four years old, has attended Sunday school and heard some things she does not understand.

Lillian said: "Mother, what is the soul?"

Mother replied: "Child, the soul is the mind, the part of you that thinks."

There was silence for a little bit and then Lillian said: "Mother, how will God get wings fastened on to the mind?"

Mother did not answer. After a short silence Lillian said: "Mother, is God and Central the same?"

By this time father had begun to take notice and answered: "Not in our town."

FALL MODELS MAINTAIN THE BEAUTY OF SUMMER MILLINERY

AS IF to challenge comparison with the newly arriving hats for fall these late-summer models in sports and street hats maintain the beauty of summer millinery. They are presented because they represent styles that have considerable stability and may be made to do service another season.

Every one of the shapes shown above appears with little variations with the arrival of spring or fall, one year after another. They are conservative and may be worn with assurance. The straw hat at the upper left is one interpretation of the French sailor which we have always with us. Some years its crown is a little lower, or higher, its brim wider or narrower. Here its crown is high and its brim wide. It is faced with broadened silk and has a sash of narrow ribbon about the crown.

The handsome sailor of black lisle braid with white hemp facing is a perennial favorite and it is always banded with ribbon, usually finished with a tailored bow. By slight but subtle variations of the crown lines it is made to be becoming to both slender and full faces; bell crowns for the slim, and straight crowns for the round ones.

The silk covered hat with narrow piping braid at the center of the group is an all-the-year-round pattern. It is ornamented with embroidery done in raffia and faced with silk. It can face either summer or winter skies without chagrin and belongs in the useful class of demi-season hats, so dear to the tourist. Just below it at the left another fabric hat employs duvetyn and silk in its construction and such dependable trimming as may be made of narrow tinsel-edged ribbon and small celluloid rings. The satin hat at the right has a narrow braid laid row after row about its crown and is finished with a wreath of small maple leaves, grapes and garden flowers.

Thus the season's millinery makes its bow of exit—to respond to an encore in warmer climes.

FALL BLOUSES SHOW LITTLE IN WAY OF STYLE INNOVATIONS

FALL blouses have made their quiet entry, with very little in the way of style innovations to herald them, but with interesting new details in construction and trimming to invite attention.

Designers have not introduced any startlingly new styles, but have concentrated their attention on making the best of these we already have—that is the conservative tuck-in, the popular over-blouse with peplum more or less long, and the tie-back styles. Georgette continues the most popular of materials with satin and crepe-de-chine gaining ground and the knitted silk blouses making good headway. Necks and sleeves are varied so that each woman may choose a becoming line. There are round, boat-shaped and "V" neck openings, all of them moderately high; elbow sleeves, many of them bell-shaped, are preferred to long sleeves, and among the fancier blouse sleeves are abbreviated.

For trimming there is a revival of beads in both the bugle and seed varieties, used repeatedly together. They make the most effective borders for the edges of sleeves, and peplums and stitchery of heavy embroidery silk is ingeniously used with them sometimes as in the blouse of georgette pictured above. Bugle and seed beads make the center of bands of stitchery, crossing the blouse at the front and extending up and down the sides. A sunburst of bugle and seed beads is placed at the center of the front, on the shoulder at each side and at the waist line. This kind of decorative work on fancy blouses is not difficult to do, and, what with hemstitching, beadwork and simple straight-line styles, it does not require much courage for the home dressmaker to undertake the making of blouses for herself.

Heavenly Ministers

By REV. LEW W. GOSNELL
Assistant Dean, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be the heirs of salvation?—Heb. 1:14.

When Lazarus, the beggar, died, he was carried by the angels to Abraham's bosom (Luke 16:22). A friend of the writer likes to fancy that the angels carried Lazarus around the Milky Way, to show him the glories of God's universe, since he had never traveled very far in this world.

Matthew Henry, the quaint old commentator, says: "One angel one would think sufficient, but here are more, as many as were sent for Elijah, Ananias, king of Egypt, had his chariot drawn by kings, but what was that honor to this? Saints ascend in the virtue of Christ's ascension; but this convey of angels is added for state and decorum. Saints shall be brought home not only safely but honorably. What were the bearers at the rich man's funeral, though probably those of the first rank, compared with Lazarus' bearers? The angels were not shy of touching him, for his sores were on his body, not on his soul, which was presented to God without spot or wrinkle or any such thing. 'Now blessed angels,' said a good man, just expiring, 'now come and do your office.'"

But these spirits not only minister to the heirs of salvation at death, but during their lifetime also. Who knows how many deliverances, seemingly natural, are due to their ministry? They may convey every train and every boat carrying a servant of God, so that nothing outside the will of God may befall us.

Philip Doddridge, the hymn writer, fell from a horse when a boy, but was remarkably preserved from injury. The neighbors said it was a miracle. When he became a man, he once dreamed he reached heaven and was passing in review pictures of all the incidents of his life. Among the rest was a representation of his fall from the horse, in his boyhood. But the divine artist had put upon the canvas one figure of which he had not been aware, for the picture showed a mighty angel, bearing the boy up in his hands lest he be dashed against the stones!

We are told Satan goes to church, and we may believe it. But the angels also attend. Paul says in I Corinthians 11:10: "For this cause ought the woman to have power on her head because of the angels." "Power" means the sign of authority, a covering. In other words, the angels are present in our assemblies and the women should be modestly apparelled, for the angels have a high sense of the proprieties of worship: they come from heaven, where the seraphim veil their faces while they adore God. What a practical word for modern congregations! Not only do angels minister to us in life and death, but they will minister in the scenes connected with our glorification at the end of the age. Again and again they appear in the book of Revelation, and Jude says: "Behold the Lord cometh with 10,000 of His saints," or holy ones, including angels as well as saints. They will deal with the wicked, gathering out of the kingdom all things that offend. Rogues who have escaped officers of the law will not be able to elude angels. But best of all, a day comes when the Lord will descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and the trumpet of God; the dead in Christ will rise and the living be changed, while both together will be caught up to meet the Lord in the air.

It is wonderful enough that these mighty, holy beings minister to redeemed men here below. But there are other facts which deepen our amazement. Paul says: "Know ye not that we shall judge angels?" (I Cor. 6:3) that is, fallen angels. But, turning to the holy, elect angels, we read of them being "round about the throne," and while we gaze upon them we hear a voice saying: "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me on my throne" (Rev. 3:21). It is redeemed man, not angels, who is to be set over the works of God's hands, as is clearly set forth in Hebrews (2:5-8).

Some reader of this sermon may not have accepted Christ as his personal Savior and may feel he has no part in the ministry of God's angels. How good it is to know your share in this blessed privilege may begin at once, for "there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth" (Luke 15:10). Shall we not this day set these choirs of heaven to singing and adoring the Lamb in the midst of the throne, who is the Lord of angels and the Redeemer of sinners?

Religion.

Religion is the transfiguration of all the facts of life; it is the view of all things sub specie aeternitatis, the realization of life as the incarnation of sublime ideals. Such religion is often spoken of as dreamy and impracticable; but, until we get more of this ideal element into common life, the work of the world will never be properly done.—Rev. Frank Walters.

Boy's Rejoinder to Puzzled Tourist Responsible for Distinction Enjoyed by Kentucky Hamlet.

"A village in my state," says a Kentucky representative, "had for many years the unique distinction of possessing two names. It received the second but more popular name in this way:

"A stranger who had lost, or thought he had lost, his way, found himself at a point on the turnpike where two ramshackle cottages, a blacksmith and an incognito postoffice stood. The only human being in sight was the traditional barefooted boy.

"Boy," said the stranger, 'can you tell me how far it is to Orangeburg?' 'Mister,' said the youngster, 'you're admirable sententiousness, 'you're plum sock in it.'

"And Plum Sock it became and remained."—Exchange.

Darkey Got More Out of Garden Than Ever the Owner Was Lucky Enough to Get.

Not long ago a couple of negroes who had long before been neighbors in a southern state rather unexpectedly met in Philadelphia. Of course, they talked of old times in the South and one of them remarked:

"How 'bout dat truck garden, Joe? When I left you had jest taken it over. Did it pay?"

"Well," said Joe, "I didn't have nothing to complain 'bout."

"I always had a mighty pore opinion 'bout dat truck garden," continued the other darkey. "You remember I told you before you got it that you would never get your money back."

"But I did get my money back," returned the other. "I made more out of that garden than the owner ever did."

"You don't say so?"

"I shore does," continued the other, "I got the rent out of it, and that's what the owner never got!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Best Politics.

"Do you think a practical politician can afford to place patriotic duty above personal interests?"

"He can't afford to do otherwise," replied Senator Sorghum. "A practical politician is one who succeeds in getting elected; and the voters on my way haven't any use for a man who doesn't love his country."

NOTHING NOVEL ABOUT THAT

Old Joe Had Tried "Electricity" and Found It Was No Cure for Rheumatism.

Old Joe Carter had suffered from rheumatism until, he declared, he had "no patience with it," but he was always eager to hear of possible remedies, and when his sister in Mobile wrote that she knew of a cure that had been tried with great success, and would tell all about it on her next visit, old Joe was all excitement.

"Now, Mary!" he exclaimed to his sister, eagerly, a few minutes after she had reached the house, "you-all tell me 'bout dat cure for rheumatism! I was so anxious I could hardly wait fo' yo' to get heah!"

"Well, Joe," began the sister, "it's electricity and—"

Before she could continue Old Joe interrupted: "De iden, Mary, of yo' comin' heah suggestin' dat to me! Don't you-all remember dat only last summer I was struck by lightning, and it didn't do me no good?"—Philadelphia Ledger.
